latest revision, February 2002

The purpose of this report is to present the results of the inventory and reorganization of the Harvard Semitic Museum Photographic Archives undertaken during the summer of 1995 after its transfer to the Visual Collections of the Harvard Fine Arts Library. The report has been substantially modified and elaborated upon during FY 96. The report indicates the types of records available for the constituent parts of the collection, it provides a list of the items and a count of the number of images in each part, and indicates what is present and what is missing or otherwise problematic about it. It gives a brief characterization of the contents of each unit and includes a list of the photographers whose work is to be found amongst them, particularly for the nineteenth century material. It also provides the current location of each part by newly-assigned box or unit number. It closes with summary assessments of the organization of the collection, of the records, of non-organizational problems to be addressed (such as preservation), and of the card index, with some recommendations for further improvement.

HSM CORE COLLECTION

The original accession book records 1642 numbered photographs and their sources, most with subject descriptions. Photos 1428-1642 documented the classical architecture of Rome; otherwise, the collection is devoted to Palestine, Jordan, Lebanon, Syria, Egypt (& Sinai), ancient and "modern," and pharaonic and Mesopotamian artifacts. Of the original 1642, 1558 remain; only the 84 missing photographs are recorded here. The primary photographers were Frank Mason Good for Francis Frith, the Bonfils family, Antonio Beato and the Alinari studio. Small numbers of Roman views came from G. Gatteschi (5), Niski Landi (3) & Spadoni (1). At an unknown time (probably early 1970s) the original numbering was arbitrarily recommenced from 1701 to 1735. These include Bonfils (1701-26), all Palestine; Zangaki (1727 & 32), Arnoux (1728) & Sébah (1729-31), all Egypt. The presence or absence of copy negatives and copy prints is also indicated. The absence of both indicates the likelihood that the photo(s) in question went missing before 1942. If either one is present, the originals were still in the collection as of the 1970s. Thus 19 prints (396, 1113-30), which were present at that time, were not transferred to the Visual Collections. The Core Collection resides in boxes 1-60.

Due to size, photos 772-3 (Baalbek) & 744-6 (Damascus) are in AKP office; photos 1428-1432 & 1633-1641 are in a marked drawer in the back of the VC. "Bonfils duplicates" includes a copy of HSM 396 (Bonfils #306).

Instances where only the copy negatives and/or copy prints are missing (total: 10 negatives, 8 prints):

<sup>1</sup>Whoever arranged these photos in archival boxes at the Semitic Museum elided these numbers completely; they were already missing at the time of the core collection's rediscovery in 1970.

The Core Collection ends with 1642, but also includes the 1701-1735 addendum. Clearly, there are instances where negatives and prints were not made for some sections of the collection. In all likelihood this is due to subject: the Roman material was of less concern to the Semitic Museum curators.

Bonfils duplicates:

36 original Bonfils prints which either replicate Core Collection photos or some of the later accessioned material. They are located in box 61. Lists are in the box, the file box, and the accession binder. They were received by the museum sometime prior to 1942. Various units of the Archives contain many other Bonfils prints, noted below.

The HAYNES COLLECTION.

The collection is complete, 1-120. The records are in the original HSM accession book. There is a complete duplicate set. The Haynes Collection also includes seven copy negatives and prints, listed here. Subjects include Hittite reliefs, Phrygian, Greek, Early Christian & Byzantine, Islamic & vernacular architecture (esp. troglodytic), and a few ethnographic views. Sites in anc. provinces of Asia Minor: Lycaonia, Phrygia & Cappadocia; and Syria: Qal'at Sim'an & Aleppo. The collection is in boxes 62-70.

HARVARD COLLEGE LIBRARY (HCL) PHOTOGRAPHS

HCL 1-171 had been transferred from the Harvard College Library to the Semitic Museum. They are a highly diverse group of images. Five Francis Frith albumen prints of Levantine subjects and the twenty prints of Islamic India by Samuel Bourne, Bourne & Shepherd, Francis Frith and unidentified photographers will stay with the Archives. They represent architecture, landscape and ethnography, in that order. They are located in box 70A. The rest will be placed in the Visual Collections.

LATER ACCESSIONED MATERIALS, acquired 1977-1992

Records in the file box containing accession information do not always match materials present; such instances are noted here. A brief description of the material present is given; the comments column is sometimes used to describe the condition of the artifact, but also to identify anomalies in the material.

86:001:000*Fisher Collection:

Due to the size of this collection, each number is listed separately. 86:001.001-017 consist of snapshots in albums or loose in folders, or negatives taken by Edgar J. Fisher and (probably) his wife, Elisabeth Fehr Fisher between 1911 and 1933. One small album contains photos by Edgar Fisher, Jr. Most of these albums and folders contain some views of Robert College, its staff and students, and activities there; along with architecture, ethnography, public events and family photos. 86:001:018-102c consist of a great variety of albumen prints, postcards and other materials acquired by Fisher. There are numerous missing small format photos, not all of which are listed here. Additionally, the pages, not the photos, are numbered.

86:001: 016 (still within Fisher Collection).

This is a huge category, consisting of unmounted snapshots (some individually labeled), and is broken down by folder.

The numbering is haphazard and the records are inadequate.

Add.HSM categories

These objects were not accessioned by the Semitic Museum, but are listed as part of their collection. They are now assigned their own set of numbers for the purpose of recording them. The Add.HSM designation pertains only to this material. There are NO standard record sheets for this material; frequently, the records which do exist are incomplete. There are no records at all for certain items.

Karl A. Twitchell Collection: primarily Saudi Arabia and Yemen, comprising extensive photographic documentation of the landscape, cities, architecture, ethnography, geological surveys, industrialization and modernization, official and ceremonial occasions of all sorts, and the royal family and other personages. Particularly devoted to Saudi Arabia, but the Charles Crane and Norah G. Twitchell materials, in particular, favor Yemen. Aden, the Gulf and other places further afield (vacations) are included as well. The period covered is ca. 1927 to the early 1950s, the Twitchell Saudi Arabian material commencing in 1932.

Add.HSM:001:000, the Twitchell Collection, is subdivided below on account of its size.

Baroness Marie Thérèse Ullens de Schooten Archive: almost exclusively devoted to Iran, resulting from the months-long sojourns the Baroness spent there every year between 1951 and the end of the 1960s. Particular interests: major tribes, such as the Bakhtiari, Baluchi, Kurds, Turkomans, but especially the Qashqa'i, and sufism. She also accompanied her friends, André and Yedda Godard, on his rounds as Director of the Royal Archaeological Service. The slides cover the widest range of material, but are particularly strong on landscape, ethnography, especially tribes in a migratory context and sufi devotees, Islamic and vernacular architecture, and ancient Iranian bronze artifacts. Other notable features of the Archive are the films, audiotapes and the André Godard field notebooks.

Add.HSM:018:000, the Baroness Marie-Thérèse Ullens de Schooten Archive, is subdivided below on account of its size.

Lantern slide collection(s)

The lantern slides have been reviewed and organized. The lantern slides which fall within the general parameters of the Semitic Museum Photographic Archives are in four marked drawers in a lantern slide cabinet in cubicle E. There are 1613 appropriate slides, included among which are some glass plate negatives. Those with an essentially architectural subject are organized alphabetically by country, then by place and monument. The other general categories are Ethnography, Landscape, Archaeology (mainly objects), organized alphabetically according to country; Studio views, other documentary materials, and a collection of Biblical Illustrations. The William Witte Collection (79:001) and the F.H. Dodge/Theo Pockman Collection (87:001) have been kept intact due to their relative uniformity of subject matter. The Witte collection also contains a group of 23 rare autochromes. All of these materials are now fully organized and a finding aid created. 35 lantern slides of Aden, Yemen and Saudi Arabia from Fouad Debbas are kept separately with 2 copy negs. (Add.HSM:014:000). 383 of the slides were judged inappropriate for the collection, but deserving of new homes, a few perhaps elsewhere in the Visual Collections. Their subject matters are as follows:

Swedenborgiana:

Swedenborg, portraits	14
Swedenborg's homes and personal items	21
Swedenborg & contemporaries, works by	34
Swedenborgian churches	30
non-church Swedenborgian buildings	10
Eminent Swedenborgians, portraits	89
Sweden, cities, buildings & landscapes	54
Sweden, historical scenes & ethnography	18
"Devil's Bible," Royal Library, Stockholm	1
Hymns & Carols	8
Ireland, revolutionary events and personages (negs)	14
Vatican, ceremonies (negs)	25
Passion Plays (negs)	15
India, missionary work (negs)	3
Uganda, missionary work (negs)	18
Congo, ethnographic views	2
China, ethnographic views (negs)	4
Japan, ethnographic views (84.010)	19
Sailing Ship "Benjamin F. Packard"	1

Approximately 50 slides were severely damaged and have been discarded. Another 1,167, having been examined and evaluated by JBS, are recommended for discarding as well. They are not of any real utility to anyone due to the subject matter or quality of the images. These include old copywork from published material and redundant or unedifying materials of various sorts.

SUMMARY

Organization:

The various components of the collection are arranged in boxes of various types, most of them large, flat archival ones. All of these are provided continuous numbering. The accession numbers of the contents of each box and, in some cases, other content information is provided on the front of each box. Since arriving in the Visual Collections, unaccessioned materials have been provided identifying numbers commencing with "Add.HSM:"

The material in some of the boxes has been rearranged, and some of the boxes themselves have been rearranged and renumbered. In some cases, the accessioned material does not follow chronological order. This is due to the size or format of the section in question. For the most part, albums do not share boxes with loose prints, and most stereographs and postcards are grouped at the end.

The material itself is usually fairly well numbered, although, often as not, little attention was given to internal organization before accession numbers were given to a particular lot. In some cases, especially with larger collections or albums, the numbering system breaks down due to the large numbers of small format photos; some lots contain numerous unnumbered photos. Usually, the accession numbers are written in pencil on the upper corner of the back of the print, or on its mount (this applies to other documents as well).

Records:

The records are kept in a large (file) box. An original accession book survives for the core collection with individual identifications for each photo. For the later accessioned material (1977 on), sheets with the accession numbers and the corresponding identifications are kept in folders in the (file) box. These sheets also provide a record of the source and provenance of the material. There is also a binder with copies of all of the accession sheets, some of which are not in the file box. Sometimes there are xeroxed copies of these sheets in the boxes with the material. In addition, there are individual photo data sheets for all prints between HSM 1 and HSM 84:006:019 in nine looseleaf binders.

The system of subject headings for the card index could stand much improvement (discussed below). It is complete up to 87:013, while the accessioned material continues to 1992.

Problems (non-organizational):

Damaged materials, absence of acid free interleavings, acidic mounts, photos coming unglued from mounts decaying negatives and reels of film. A general assessment of the preservation requirements of the collection is in order. Perhaps after the Ullens Archive is fully dealt with, income might become available for this purpose. Nevertheless, grant sources should be sought for this vital purpose.

Problems (contd.):

Materials with relatively limited historical value to the Semitic Museum collection:

Parts of the Fisher Collection contain large numbers of stateside photos from family trips. These and several of the other travel albums in the Archives contain a great deal of material that falls outside the Islamic world, let alone the Levant, though the material does reflect the habits of bourgeois tourism of the time.

All but 24 prints in the HCL Collection have been transferred to the Visual Collections main collection due to lack of any fit with the parameters of the Archives

Anomalous lantern slides are discussed elsewhere.

In such a great mass of material, there are other minor incongruities obvious to anyone who reads this report.

Unidentified material: many snapshots in albums; other prints and lantern slides.

Copy negatives: These were made by the HSM for the core collection and a small part of the Haynes Collection in order to facilitate the filling of orders for copies of the photographs in the collection. They have proved to be a disappointment in that they are of low quality. New negatives made by John Cook have been significantly superior. The ones from HSM should probably not be used to make prints. The copy prints made from them retain their utility as a handy visual guide to the core collection, preventing excessive wear and tear on it by researchers and other users. In the future it might be a good thing to have a new set of negatives made by John Cook. In the meantime, negatives newly produced to fill orders can be retained for future use.

Major instances of missing material:

from the core collection: 19 albumen prints, including Bonfils prints and oversized Roman views, missing since the 1970s.
from the later accessioned material: some Bonfils stereographs (78:005); 12 prints of Mecca and Medina by H.A. Mirza & Sons (83:006); 20 prints of Mecca and Medina by C. Snouck Hurgronje (84:006); 10 postcards of Aleppo (83:000:015).

Card index:

The collection would appear to have been given subject headings through 87:013. It is done alphabetically by location (city or site), using the modern names, (ie, Nablus, not Shechem). It is short on tracings (there is no “Shechem see Nablus”). Building/feature names are then alphabetized within locations. Problems may arise when one knows a monument or feature without knowing the site name, such as when one searches for Solomon’s Pools under this name, without knowing to check under Etham. This situation could be improved by the inclusion of more tracings or remedied by the establishment of a database. Beyond this the subject headings already in place are in need of critical evaluation.

The most problematic category is that of ethnography. There is a “People” category under “P”, which is then subdivided by region. There are also ethnographic types and views under some of the locational categories, but in no systematic fashion.

Although the core collection accession book is organized by specific photographers (although only in the order of acquisition), entries by the photographer for the core collection or for later accessioned material are not included in the subject catalog.

At the end of the ordered cards there are several groups of cards which are NOT integrated into the rest. Some of these were for materials which remain unidentified; others seem to be ready for integration.

There also exist cards which refer to numbers for photographs no longer with the collection. These fall under the following groupings:

FCD1: the Fouad C. Debbas Collection of Bonfils photographs. This was on loan and has been returned. The cards have been removed from the “active” file, but retained for reference.

FD3, FD4, FD6, FD7: also Fouad C. Debbas Collection, also removed from the active file but retained.

RM : accession number : the Ralph Marcove collection. This was on long-term loan, but was returned to NYC when the Semitic Museum’s photographic operation was closed down. The cards have been removed but are currently kept in a group at the end of the card index. According to Mary Ellen Taylor (ex-curator), there was some discussion of Mr. Marcove eventually giving his collection to the Semitic Museum. Recent events there obviated that possibility.

LS 79.001 refers to the Wm. Witte lantern slide collection, now kept as a unit in a lantern slide cabinet in the back of the VC, which was provided with subject heading cards.
